THE purpose of this series is to present to college students of English composition, essays by modern authors which deal in a fresh way with such subjects as politics, science, literature and nature. Entire essays are used. The student has therefore the opportunity of studying a topic in its logical upbuilding from introduction to conclusion, and he will thus gain a knowledge not merely of effective phrasing, but also of the very bone and muscle of English composition.

The volumes in the series have none of the ear-marks of the ordinary textbook. On the contrary, they are so attractively printed and bound that the student will be glad to keep them for his library.

THE ECLOGUES OF BAPTISTA MANTUANUS

EDITED, WITH INTRODUCTION AND NOTES, BY

WILFRED P. MUSTARD, Ph. D.

Collegiate Professor of Latin in the Johns Hopkins University

156 pages. 8vo. $1.50

The text is based upon that of the first printed edition, of Mantua, 1498. The Introduction treats of the life of Mantuan, his family and friends, his works, his popularity, the wide use of his Eclogues as a school-book, and their influence upon Sixteenth Century literature. The Notes are mainly devoted to the poet's use of his great classical models.

"It is a most curious, interesting, and scholarly volume."—Educational Times.

"La masse de renseignements accumulés dans ce petit volume est considérable et témoigne de recherches approfondies."—Revue Critique.
